Dear readers,

Numerous studies confirm that Vienna holds a top position among the major cities of the world in many respects: the Austrian capital was again ranked the most liveable city worldwide in the 2011 Mercer Study, and according to the European Green City Index, Vienna is one of the greenest cities in Europe. For the first time, the Global Cities Index has also included Vienna in the 15 international cities with the most influence on globalisation.

Vienna's increasing success as a tourist destination is another clear trend confirmed in 2011. With an annual total of over 11 million overnight stays, the Vienna tourist industry has managed to achieve an increase of 5 % compared to the record results of 2010. At the same time, Vienna remains one of the most popular venues for international congresses.

High availability of qualified labour, scientific know-how and above-average labour productivity are just some of the benefits that make Vienna a highly attractive business location. Even in times of crisis, the Vienna region has kept its economic stability and strong social cohesion.

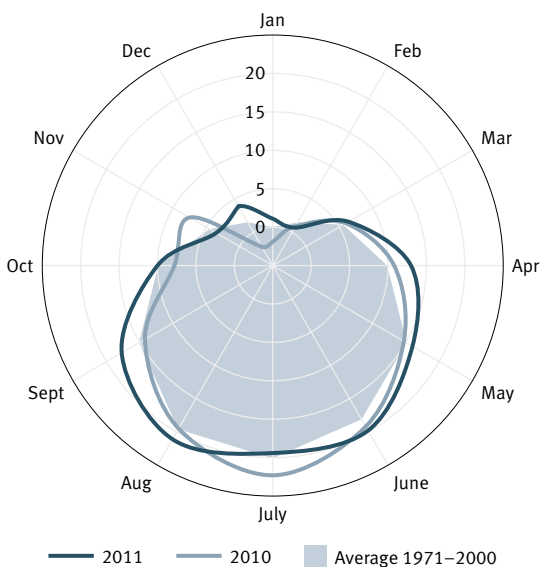

The present brochure illustrates these and many other facts and figures on Vienna's population, the city's area, its education system, economic structure, traffic and transport infrastructure, cultural life and public administration. The public transport plan printed on the back is a useful feature that will help you get around Vienna during your stay.

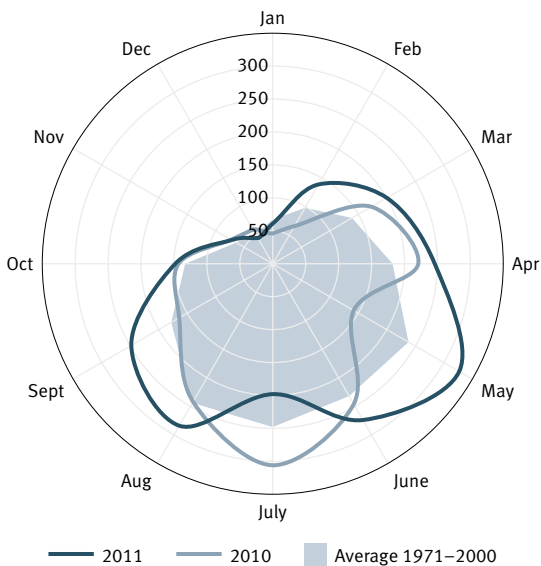

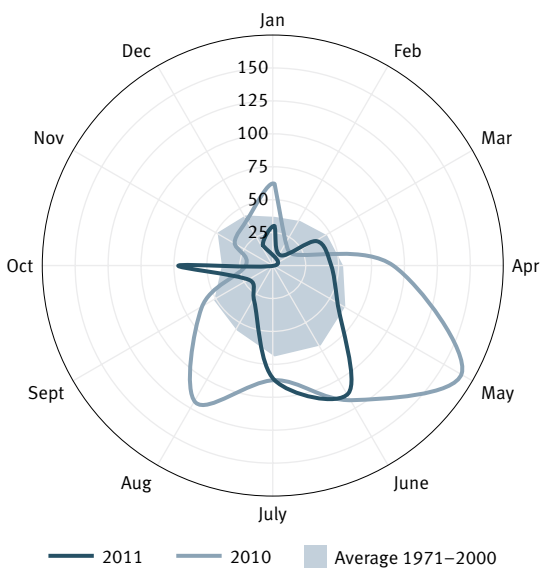

I am confident that the current issue of "Vienna in Figures" will make interesting and enjoyable reading.
